

INTRODUCTION: WHAT IS TEMPORADA ALTA?

Temporada Alta - The Autumn Festival of Catalonia takes place in the cities of Girona and Salt, during the months of October, November and December. The two City Councils are the organisers of the festival together with the Generalitat of Catalonia, the Girona Regional Council and Bitò Produccions. Bitò Produccions have been in charge of the management and artistic direction since 1992, when it was first decided to create a stable program to promote the creation and evolution of the Temporada Alta Festival with the idea of encouraging the presence of theatre in the city of Girona. At present its consolidation means it is the best international letter of cultural presentation for the City Councils of Salt and Girona. In the same way, it has become a cultural reference in Catalonia as a festival of the best Catalan theatre and as an entrance door for the finest international theatre. It is differentiated as being unique in Spain for its organisation, which is based on an innovative formula: a festival organised by public bodies (Girona City Council, Girona Regional Council, Generalitat of Catalonia and Salt City Council) with a large economic contribution from the private sector. Since its first edition the Temporada Alta Festival has received support from a large group of companies and organisations that are members of the Theatre Patrons' Club, as well as other sponsors. This gives prestige to this sector and guarantees an audience for the festival. Furthermore, the festival is managed privately (the production and artistic direction are the responsibility of Bitò Produccions). The value of this new formula is that it enables integrating private initiative in a program of the highest level.

The Temporada Alta - Autumn Festival of Catalonia program is outstanding for the quality of the scenic arts (theatre, dance and music), even though it is also complemented by parallel activities such as cinema, courses, conferences, work in progress or multimedia art. The names of the highest quality foreign companies and artists who form part of the program have helped the festival earn the recognition of the intellectual public and that of the sector itself. A commitment to the quality of the content has led to very high public acceptance of an eclectic festival where we find offers for all types of spectators: intellectual, commercial, families. The festival, at the same time as programming famous names on the international stage, also makes it possible to see new talents.

Temporada Alta - Autumn Festival of Catalonia aims to be a large production centre for Catalan artists and a motor that generates greater involvement in stage productions in the Girona region. For this reason there are absolute premiers each week, many of them joint productions for the festival itself. Therefore, as a festival it is characterised not so much as an exhibition, but for taking the risk of the joint production of shows and being the setting for the presentation of absolute premiers, a place of creation and adventure for the artists and their audiences alike.

A BRIEF HISTORY

The Temporada Alta Festival was born seventeen years ago in Girona with the idea of improving local stage productions. Always under the management and artistic direction of Bitò Produccions, the festival began as a short cycle of theatre, with a maximum of eight performances until 1995, but with a clear commitment to staging premiers.

Temporada Alta grew slowly and in 1996 a significant change took place. From the eight shows programmed in 1995, it expanded to include eighteen, promoting the presence of foreign artists and companies.

Temporada Alta was now becoming a theatre festival with an international vocation.

There was no turning back. Temporada Alta had become an International Theatre Festival and so extended itself throughout the autumn, until early December, just like nowadays. Since 1998 to date the number of shows included in the program has never stopped growing. Since its beginnings until last year, Temporada Alta has presented almost 600 different shows.

In 2001, Temporada Alta decided to open itself up to joint productions, with three proposals, and extend the offer to other disciplines such as dance and music.

The presence of public bodies in the festival was also extended in 2005 with the signature of an agreement with the Generalitat of Catalonia. Temporada Alta is recognised as a Festival of scenic arts and is now called the Autumn Festival of Catalonia. One year later, in 2006, the Ministry for the Arts joined the organisation (even though it had been contributing some financing since 2004). and the 2,150,000 pesetas of the first year were increased in 2008 to 2,157,113 euros.

Temporada Alta is a festival with enormous national and international prestige. The program, which occupies 13 venues in Salt and Girona, is comprised of theatre, dance and music and welcomes leading international artists, actors and companies of renown in Catalonia and Spain, while at the same time offering opportunities to new talents. Until 2008, the festival had been attended by a total of 283,660 spectators, with more than 90% average occupation since 2000

1992, Bitò creates a theatre festival in Girona

Temporada Alta was born at the hands of Bitò Produccions and supported by Girona City Council from the outset. The program only included “four hilarious shows” which were staged at the La Mercè Centre Cultural in Girona. In this first edition, the festival created the Theatre Patrons' Club, a formula created by Bitò to bring more money into theatre programs and which was to become one of the keys to establishing the festival.

1996, the audience is doubled

The 1996 edition was one of the most important ones. In five years the number of spectators has doubled and Bitò began to trace the embryonic design of festival with the complicity of Girona City Council. The poster was commissioned from an artist for first time. Since then one of the surprises of the festival each year would be the poster.

2009, the Girona festival's best edition

2009 was by far the best year because of the high quality programme, featuring both national and international artists, and the number of shows premièred. There were 6,230 more spectators than in the previous edition. The 2009 festival also maintained its commitment with festivals and theatres from outside Catalonia to put on coproduced shows, thanks to the financial assistance of the Interreg IV programme of the European Union.

Outstanding artists: William Kentridge, Declan Donnellan i Cheek by Jowl, Peter Brook, Daniel Veronese, Claudio Tolcachir, Sidi Larbi Cherkaoui, Maria Pagés, Krystian Lupa, The Watermill Theatre, Picolo Teatro di Milano, Slava Polunin, Baro D'evol Cirk, Ute Lemper and Christoph Marthale

2010, A growing audience

The festival took a small step forward in 2010: the programme and the productions premièred were high in quality and audience reception was excellent. That's why the 2010 edition had the highest number of visitors in the festival's history.

Outstanding artists: Krystan Lupa, Claudio Tolcachir, Michael Pennington, Teatri Uniti, the Forman Brothers, Joan Ollé, Julio Manrique, Tricycle, Marta Angelat, Sergi López, Carlos Santos.
